PROFILE

I completed my bachelor's and master's degrees in psychology, focusing primarily on neurosciences, cognitive psychology, and clinical neuropsychology. In recent projects, I have worked extensively on predicting behavior and cognition from brain data using multivariate pattern analysis. Thereby, I became highly interested in studying psychopathology from the biomedical perspective.

In my PhD work now, I want to explore the correlates of substance use in individuals at clinical high-risk state for psychosis and identify factors that promote the transition to severe mental illness like schizophrenia. Here, I aim to contribute to the prevention and early detection of these disorders by analyzing multi-modal data with state-of-the-art machine learning techniques.
